and severall others about six years past and they were going to run some lines of a land of Land belonging to Thomas Long called Washford which was commonly called the first Land and old Joye Hobbs shewed them amazred red oaks standing by the sides of the maine branch of mony which is about a hundred and fifty yard above a house where Williamson Lukke now lives and told them that oak was the first bounder of washford and that he was present at the marking of it and further sayeth not . . . Mathew Dorman

The deposition of David French aged twenty years or thereabouts being sworn sayeth that he was presents with Mathew Dorman at the same time and agrees with him in his evidence only he remembers that Joye Hobbs said the Land was taken up Henry Heyman but differeth in nothing else and further sayeth not . . . David French
